Declares That Spans Were Cheaply Built With Little or No Regard for Rights of Navigation.

The report of the board of army engineer officers appointed to draw up rules and regulations governing the opening and closing of 59 drawbridges in Boston harbor and adjacent waters, discloses conditions which demand immediate attention This information has been conveved to Secretary of War Dickinson, and action was received by Lieut. Col. gives to his recent state paper an inter-Edward Burr, the local engineer officer,

Although no radical action is at present planned to cause the railroad companies and the city authorities who own We may, in legislative ranks, and control the bridges to make them | modern structures, the local engineer now has the authority to do that. If complaints are made that draws are slow of operation and that either water or land traffic is delayed, Colonel Burr can take action. If found necessary to order improvements he can also do this.

The opinion of the board of engineers on the condition of Boston bridge is expressed in the following language:

"Boston is the commercial center of populous metropolitan and suburban dis-trict that supplies daily a heavy passenger traffic to and from the city.

"The bridges were built and located without due regard for the interests of navigation in respect to their relations to each other or to the channels of the streams crossed by them.

. "They were almost without exception, built of the most economical type of pile built of the most economical type of pile structure, with narrow draw openings 40 feet or less in clear width and with draw that nowadays are laying the golden that nowadays are laying the golden spans of the jack-knife, retractile or other type below the standards accepted today. All of these bridges were low and many did not and do not now permit the is now an important factor in many passage under them of a rowboat at cases at law, comes the ink expert to try mean high tide.

"The board desires to invite special attention, to the character of these bridges, which by their low elevations and generally antiquated construction. cause unnecessary delays to the traffic crossing over them as well as to the water-borne traffic passing through them.

"The bridges have as a rule been located and designed with a view only to the convenience of land traffic and to economy of construction. They were built originally as pile structures and many of them continue as such. The draw openings were in the general case less than 40 feet wide in the clear, many of them do not now exceed 40 feet, very few wider than 50 feet and but one over 60 feet. They are so low that, with some exceptions, no steam vessel can pass under them at any stage of the tide, that small boats cannot pass under them at mean high tide and in some cases cannot pass at stages above half tide.

"In addition to their obstructive physical conditions some of the bridge owners, to wit, the city of Boston and two railroad companies, have undertaken in the interest of the bridge traffic to es- This golden year, with those who dwell tablish regulations restricting traffic on navigable waterways by determining when it would be permitted to pass through their bridges and have in practical effect established such regulations by instructions to their drawtenders."

traveling will remain a luxury for some time to come. Major Von Parseval was chairman of the committee. The cost of constructing an air vessel of about 282,500 cubic feet capacity together with a shed for housing it, would be about $100,000. An air ship of this size would, it is said, carry 18 passengers in addition to the crew Supposing ascents could be made on 200 days out of the 365, the annual working expenses are estimated at about $75,000. so that if the full number of passengers was carried at each ascent, a charge of more than $25 would have to be made for a day's trip in order to cover expenses and allow of a small profit. Since it is not probable that a full complement of passengers would be carried every day, it would be necessary to raise the trips made with only a small number of the trips made with only a small number of the trips made with only a small number of the trips made with only a small number of the trips made with only a small number of assengers, and even if a number of assengers, and even if a number of assengers of short duration were made per fares in order to compensate for the Opera. AMERICAN LEAGUE OPENS ITS ANNUAL MEETING TODAY

Question of National League President for Coming Year Not Decided at the First Meeting.

HANLON MAY GET IT

NEW YORK-The American league holds its annual meeting this afternoon and President Johnson says his organization will be all through its affairs by 5 p. m. The directors, who concluded their deliberations Tuesday, dismissed the charges that the New York team had maintained a bureau to disclose the signals and signs used by opponents. In dismissing the charges, however, the board resolved that any manager or official found guilty of operating a sign-tipping bureau shall be barred from baseball for all time. This motion was carried unanimously.

While the National league directors were discussing at this morning's session the status of Fogel, the new manager of the Philadelphia club, the men who are the real owners of that club were announced as being Harry P. Sauers, A. F. L. Shields and Grant Lafferty, all of

Nothing but routine matters were dealt with at the first meeting Tuesday, the all-important question of electing a president not being taken up.

It now looks like a deadlock, with John M. Ward holding the votes of the New York, Brooklyn, Chicago and Philadelphia clubs and John A. Heydler, the present president, sure of the support of the Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Boston clubs. Stanley Robison of St. Louis holds the deciding vote, but he has not yet decided for whom he will cast it.

Baseball men now believe that the and Ward each have four votes, will look around for a compromise candidate and will be played before the spring recess. that the man who has the best chance of being elected in this contingency is Edward Hanlon, former owner of the

BASKETBALL TEAM AT PRINCETON HAS REGULAR SYSTEM

Improved Training Methods and More Attention to Team Work the Aim of Captain Veeder.

HARD GAME TODAY

PRINCETON, N. J.-The Princeton varsity basketball team closed its second week with a victory over Manhattan College. The work of the team is steadily improving in all departments and the squad of men is working hard under the direction of Coach Harry Shorter of the Orange Athletic Club. Shorter is a star player and can illustrate his coaching by playing himself.

The team this year has been getting exceptional support from the students. The attendance is large at each game and the sport is enjoyed. In previous years the teams have had but poor support and the confidence in them was not great, but this year's team has shown that it is good and so assures interesting games to the audiences.

Captain Veeder largely explained the success of the team by saying "The team this year is run on a regular system, no dribbling is the rule and our game is good passing and team work."

VASHINGTON KEEPS FABS ON CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON-The Democratic situation in New York state is developing bill, which, according to the program of unfavorably by the army engineers. The several interesting features of late, and the House leaders, is to be passed at this inner harbor of Great Salt pond, Block the politicians in this city are watching session. them closely. As has frequently been the case, William Randolph Hearst has the center of the stage, although on this occasion he does not seem to have sought chusetts, second Republican member of it. The seeking has been on the other The Democratic leaders of the state realize that they must have Mr. Hearst's support if they are to stand any chance of winning a state victory in 1910, and so they are laying all sorts of plans to trap him. Thus far, however, Mr. Hearst has managed to escape, but whether he will do so to the end of the chapter is a question which nobody at this time can answer. New York Democrats have been cana candidate for Governor next year. It is a situation presenting many difficulties. They have been out of power in the state for a long time, and their efforts to regain power have produced much factionalism. There are city factions and up-state factions, and one faction is very bitter toward another. Unless this can be changed and harmony restored, the party cannot possibly hope for a victory next fall.

Mr. Osborne, the up-state man who is mentioned for the gubernatorial nomination, is said to possess force and ability, and might be able to unite the party. But objection is made to him because of unfriendly relations said to exist between him and Mr. Hearst, who, it is pointed out in all seriousness, ought not to be defied. The man who polled 153,000 organization, and probably will do so tovotes in the recent three-cornered contest for mayor must be considered in the gubernatorial matter, and so it happens that the Democratic leaders of the state are doing all they can to bring the editor-candidate back into the Democratic fold.

CAMBRIAN SINGERS.

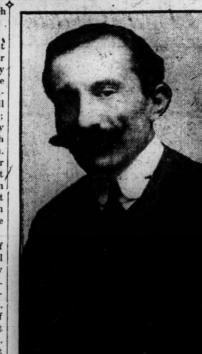

The Cambrian National Glee Singers is the name of a club of 11 Welshmen who gave a program of male choruse solos in Chickering hall, Boston, Tuesday evening. The club is making a tour of American cities. At their Boston concert, which was well attended, they were assisted by George Proctor, the pianist. Their soloists were William Lewis, Richard Thomas, Aneurin Morris, John Davies and John Stephens. The noteworthy things about the performance were the precise, yet smooth, singing of the choruses, the clear pronunciation of words, the well-adjusted proportions of tone in the various parts of the har-mony, and the uniformity of tone color in the vokes from the highest in pitch

NEW YORK MUSIC LETTER

NEW YORK-The performances of has already been lectured about in this Teutonic tongue give place to the more hasal twang of the Frenchman, which cannot be said to be strictly in keeping with the poetic legend of the Thuringer forest. One might ask: "Why not have it sung in English, if the original tongue is to be dispensed with?"

The overture apparently is the concert version, and the Venusberg scene is much shorter than that to which New bears a close resemblance to a Parisian ballet and is rather lightly sketched, lacking conspicuously in those qualities which make for the needed vivid reality of Wagner's Bacchanal. Venus opens with the words: "Toi que j'aime," and Elisabeth sings with fervor: "Salut a toi, noble demeure," all of which sound lyrical after the French rather than the German style and leaves a decidedly non-Teutonic taste in the mouth. This, although novel, is not altogether displeasing. It is rather at the first blush that one is shocked, but the impression wears

The ensemble is excellent. The American painted scenery is correct in line, but lacking in atmosphere.

On the whole a good beginning has been made in introducing Wagner at the West Side opera house. Much has been accomplished for a first attempt and as the ear grows accustomed to the French, enthusiasm may wax. The appearance of "Lohengrin" will now be awaited with

There is much complaint that no new books are really written today. This is probably true; but it is just as true that no new books were ever written. Milton borrowed of Dante, and Dante borrowed of Virgil, and Virgil borrowed Pictures are always a dainty and acceptible holiday gift, and what is more pleasing to the artistic eye than some old master or a modern one, as the taste may be? The W. J. Gardner Company, successor to Dunton & Gardner at 298 Boylston street, is offering a fine display of oils, watercolors, mezzotints, English and French prints, carbons, and old and modern masters, framed or unframed, and mirrors of various shapes.

Among the bargains which are being offered in Boston the shopper should not forget those at Watters Company, 566 Washington street, opposite the Adams house. A silk petticoat valued at $6 may be purchased for $3.98 and $5 negligees for $1.98. The fine display of aprons at bargain prices is sure to interest the shopper. Prices on aprons for mistress and maid range from 29 to 98 cents.

The shopper should not miss the exhibition and sale of the J. C. Derby Company's entire line of silverware at The Gift Shop, 1336 Beacon street, Coolidge Corner, Brookline. Silverware such as this firm puts on sale measures up to the highest standard.

Although the sale has been rather heavy, the stock of calendars at Ward's. 57 Franklin street, is not exhausted and the purchaser may still choose from a large number.

If the shopper feels that her handbag has seen sufficient service and she de sires another, she should inspect the line being shown by the Smith Patterson Company, 52 Summer street.

The W. B. Clarke Company, 26 and 28 Tremont street, has the Christmas number of the leading English magazines. Neat desk fittings and leather novelties very appropriate for gifts are also being shown.

LOGGED-OFF

ACREAGE

Results from BY-PRODUCTS of logged-off lands by use of PORTABLE WOOD-EXTRACTING PLANTS show profits of $300 per acres

EXTRACTING PLANTS show pronts of $300 per acre.

A wood extracting plant already in operation here has produced over 140 gallons of CREOSOTE and TAR per cord of fir stump wood, besides 50 bushels of chemically pure CHARCOAL.

The utilization of second growth materials for telegraph poles, railroad ties, paving blocks, etc., and the reduction of other waste materials for producing a fuel for automobiles and engines will add to above results.

The companies we represent will buy, clear on shares or develop logged-off lands that are suitable for agriculture or fruit.

UTAH COPPER WEAK

Although the New York stock market for some weeks past has been dominated largely by the professional element, with the public to a large extent eliminated, business has been of good volume. Just 23 years ago today, on Dec. 15, 1886, the New York Stock Exchange had its first million-share day. Much was made of the event at the time. Since then there have been many million-share days, and quite a number two-million-share days. However, since the house cleaning instituted by Gov. Hughes "wash sales" have een largely, if not altogether, eliminated, and the figures showing the total nount of business have not touched the two-million-share level for a long time. The volume of legitimate business, however, is probably as large as ever, if not

The bears today made the most of the war which the thousands of employees of the United States Steel Corporation have threatened to wage against the corporation for higher wages. They succeeded in causing the stock to open off a point at 901/8. It improved fractionally during the early sales. The selling of these issues caused a heavy tone to develop in the rest of the list. There were many ups and downs during the session, but there were no important price

Wheat-Trade in wheat was active and prices irregular. The market opened up with a rush on the strength of the cables, but before midday was below the final of the previous day. The strength abroad was due to covering, brought about by scarcity of Australian, good demand and for Manitobas, and growing apprehension as regards the probable supplies. The decline in values here from the opening was apparently due to further realizing on the larger receipts and belief that the labor situation is so much improved that there will be an increased movement from the Northwest. It is also expected that the government report on winter wheat would be larger than the preliminary report as a result of the increased acreased acreased acreased acreased acreased acreases.

Simonetta and Sandro

The lovely lady from Genoa who won the heart of all Florence when she came as a bride of 16 to the old Vespucci ures of her time. She was Simonetta Januensis Vespuccia, townswoman to Columbus, and her husband was Marco, kinsman to Amerigo Vespucci, who may very well have been one of the youth paying homage at her shrine. For from the moment that Lorenzo dei Medici, the great lord of Florence, introduced her into his gay circle of courtiers, poets, painters, musicians, Simonetta became the toast of all Florence, a veritable Juliet in her youth and bright friendlibeheld proud Maximilian kneeling ness and innocence of wrong. Her sibile looks out of all Botticelli's pictures, or her moments of pathos; her gentle grace, her sprightly movement, her tenderness and above all her girlish simplicity are found by turn in all the great painter's work, even as she flashes, or beams or dances or charms us or soothes us and types all that was most gracious and sweet in Italian womanhood in the verse of Lorenzo's poets. They speak of her as "our Simonetta" and the scene reproduced in the Botticelli picture, "Primavera" (Spring), is said to have recorded the delights of one of the many days passed by the group of happy friends in the fields outside Florence, when the women danced and gathered flowers and honor of beauty.

the choice of comradeship in marriage is an index to the nature of each partner, and each may learn something of what he or she is in self by studying the idiosyncrasies of the other. And not the idiosyncrasies alone, necessarily. An onlooker may often see in a wife's extravagance, perhaps, either the husband's vanity or his meanness-since extremes meet and the opposite of any human quality is just that quality turned inside out. Parsimony and extravagance are equally the effect of overestimating material values. On the other hand a quiet, dull-seeming man has often a wife of brilliant qualities. One may be sure that what she expresses is what he loves-that is, what he is inwardly: else he could not value these things in her.

Mr. Jones was an excellent man, prosperous in his business and modest in his ways, but not distinguished for anything in particular. His wife, however, Mrs. Smith-Jones, was a woman of rare accomplishments. She was an artist of more than ordinary ability, a brillian pianist, and possessed of a voice of remarkable sweetness and power.

At a large party one evening, at which she and her husband were present, her singing captivated a stranger who was one of the guests, and he asked to be introduced to her. His request was sation the hostess came and took him

"You mustn't monopolize her, Mr. Simmons," she said. "I want you to meet Mr. Jones."

"Who is Mr. Jones?" "He is her husband." "What is he noted for?"
"Noted for?" echoed the hostess. 'Why, for-for his wife!"

Joy in a New Discovery

We can never grow too old to feel a fresh joy at, each new discovery. I remember some years ago we sat upon a high ledge of rock eating wild strawberries and whiled away the time by wondering whether we could jump safely into a top of the tree that had grown up from the hollow to a level with the ledge, when suddenly we noticed that the tree had two, no, three, different kinds of leaves. Some were entire, some had one oblique lobe and some two. To a well-informed, botanical person this is no subject for excitement, but to us with our newly opened eyes it was like a revelation. We hunted the woods for trees the men sang or said their poetry in of the same kind, for we seemed never to have seen the tree before. The woods were full of them, and with three different kinds of leaves, and so the wonder grew. The past fall was the first time that we discovered violet seeds. always satisfied even himself; and it is not surprising that his belief has been resisted more or less by the world at large. A belief that sickness and death are divinely ordained conditions, and that a divinely sent Saviour was given special power to suspend the operation of divine law in order to prove his Messiahship, has not made a universal appeal; rather has it failed to satisfy the peal; rather has it failed to satisfy the reason of many people. Christian Scientists honor and love the same Saviour who has been dear to all Christendom, and this with an enlightened knowledge that sickness and death are not because of divine law, but by reason of not understanding it; that God's law never supports, but always dissipates, the belief in trouble; and that Christ Jesus proved his Messiahship not by breaking law, but by conforming to law and an unlling the lawless and disorderly. Their devotion to him as the Master Christian takes form in the effort to obey him, takes form in the effort to obey him, and they are finding that Christian Science makes plain the way to carry out his commands, for it looks beyond the person of Jesus to the Principle which Jesus himself obeyed. The "Best Seller" known by the company he keeps, then There is great rivalry among the book publishers to produce what is known as the "best seller"—the volume most sought in the shop and at the public library. In their productions they have to reckon seriously with the Bible. The Holy Bible stands supreme as the "best seller." Statistics from an article in Munsey's for Christmas leave very little doubt as to the good book being the world's "best seller." Thus it appears that "each year there are printed 17,000,-000 Protestant Bibles, Testaments and 'portions'-such as the psalms or the separate gospels—in more than 506 languages or dialects. Of these Bibles 10,000,000 are published by Bible societies, are sold far below cost, and return no financial profit to anybody. The remaining 7,000,000 are printed commercially and yield a handsome profit to the publishers. Of the 10,000,000 Bibles and parts of Bibles printed and distributed by charity, almost 2,000,000 are issued by the American Bible Society, and over 7,000,000 more by similar organizations in Great Britain." -New Haven Leader.

President Taft and the South

IT AFFORDS this newspaper no little pleasure to recall that it was among the earliest to recommend to the attention of President Taft the advisability of filling the vacancy in the supreme court by the appointment of a southern Democrat. Evidence was not wanting, of course, that the President, even before this opportunity presented itself, had displayed not only a willing but an eager disposition to fulfil his promise with regard to the ignoring of partizan lines in the South in the selection of men to fill places of honor, responsibility and emolument under the government. Not since President Cleveland's time, however, had southern Democrats been the recipients of posts in the judiciary, and this occasion in a peculiar way seemed to favor a departure wide enough to convince distinguished southerners, whose politics were not in agreement with the dominant party, that careers in the public service were no longer closed to them.

Judge Lurton, President Taft's nominee, is a native of Kentucky and has long been a resident of Tennessee. Just as the judicial duties of Judge Taft often took him into the South, so the judicial duties of Judge Lurton often bring him into the North. It was, indeed, when a judge of the same circuit, the sixth, that Judge Taft became acquainted with Judge Lurton, and it was through this experience that the former learned much about the South and its needs that is proving very useful and valuable to him as President.

Judge Lurton has long been out of politics. In the strict sense he never was a politician. But he has been, and he is, a representative southerner, and one whose advancement will be appreciated by southerners everywhere. President Taft's policy is wise and deserves to be applauded and supported. It can hardly fail to further the growing good feeling of one section for another.

BOTH San Diego and San Francisco are planning a 1915 celebration with an enthusiasm that would seem to indicate that both ends of the Panama canal open into the Pacific. If the Atlantic and Gulf coast cities catch the exposition spirit, too, every one will be able to get a show for his money during the year that the canal is opened.

It is seldom that one reads a newspaper of today without seeing the account of some achievement tending in some manner to bring the distant parts of the globe nearer together. From Melbourne comes the message that a conference has been arranged to meet in that city today between representatives of the admiralty and governments of the Fiji islands, New Zealand and the Australian commonwealth, to deal with the subject of wireless telegraphy in the Pacific. The bare statement that such a conference will take place conjures up visions of unity and consolidation such as were unknown and undreamt of a few years ago. Once the necessary stations are equipped it will be a comparatively simple matter for the heads of even the most distant dependencies to converse with the officials of the mother country, and this can have but one effect, namely, still further to unify and consolidate the British empire.

It is, however, not only the British empire that would benefit from this further application of one of the most modern discoveries, for what applies to one great empire and her dependencies would apply to all the nations of the world. And it would be only natural to affirm that the expansion of this system of easy and rapid communication by means of the wireless telegraph will very materially assist in preventing any misunderstandings that might tend to grow up between nations, and thereby hasten the day when the question of settling international difficulties by hurling one army against another will be considered a relic of bygone ages.

The newspapers that told, in one column, of the marines leaving Boston for Nicaragua, "just spoiling for a fight," and in another column of the arrival of world-famous evangelists for the purpose of turning the people's thoughts toward the Prince of Peace, set forth the fact that there are still some incongruities in our standards of civilization.

Our Output of Documents

AT THIS season of the year scores of the brightest minds in the country are engaged in compiling reports to be published before Jan. 1, showing the marvelous production of this country in all of its fields of activity and all of its departments of endeavor. This is the season, in fact, when everything is tabulated, then summarized, then generalized, then put in shape for the busy reader, so that we may all know a little, at least, of nearly everything that is going on. Only a very small percentage of us, however, have ever given a thought to one form of production which has grown up with all the other forms, which is practically a part of them, and which is by rights as interesting as the best of them. Attention might never have been directed to this line of production, indeed, if it were not necessary now to have a government official whose business is not to prepare documents about production but to prepare documents about production.

There is even competition among the departments at Washington about it, if we are to judge by the positiveness of a recent statement to the effect that no department of the national government now issues as many documents about anything as the agricultural department. But the government departments are far from being alone in this matter. All the state governments issue documents also, and all the municipal governments, and all the commissions and boards and societies, and all the corporations, and not a small number of private individuals.

Thus far we have had nothing like a comprehensive annual document on documents. Only fractions of the field are covered, at best. We have nothing that tells us why all the documents are issued or what becomes of them after they have been issued. It might be said that this would be but useless information, as we are all entitled to our suspicions as to the ultimate end of most documents. But this would be begging the question. It stands to reason that so many thousands of tons of documents would not be issued annually if somebody did not read them. Even though we might not learn anything else regarding this matter from an annual document on documents, it would be interesting, at least, to have a list of those who make use of official documents either occasionally or habitually.

Protection for the Steerage Our government is in possession of information gathered by agents assigned to duty in the steerage of immigrant-carrying liners. It is of a shocking character. Simplicity itself should mark the taking of the next step. Assuming that the reports of the government agents should be subjected to very considerable discount, the conditions would still be bad enough to cry for instant and radical correction. With the great increase in the size of the ocean liners, and the vast improvement made in their interior construction, and the shortening of the time between ports, it was believed that the early hardships of the steerage passage had by now been greatly mitigated. But this would not appear to be the case from the reports made to the government. Rather the contrary. Certain details in the present revelations seem to indicate that newer and greater evils than those that were common in the past have grown up in this connection.

Among other steps necessary for reform it is proposed that the government institute a system of immigrant ship inspection that would have the effect practically of placing the steerage under police regulations during the voyage. Taking it for granted that the conditions are as bad as reported, it would seem that nothing short of this would accomplish the desired purpose. Should objection be made to United States inspection of the steerage of foreign immigrant vessels, we have it in our power, at least, to prohibit the landing at our ports of vessels that are not provided with effective means for the safeguarding and proper accommodation of women and children. If we decide to act, difficulties will disappear, and we should decide to act promptly. The state of things reported is a disgrace to civilization.

RAILROAD connection between Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires is in sight. The missing link between the railroads controlled by the Franco-American syndicate in the states of Sao Paulo and Santa Catharina, and those operated by the allied Belgian companies in Rio Grande do Sul, is to be forged much more rapidly than had been expected; for the two groups, hitherto decidedly hostile, recently came to an agreement by which the former acquired a considerable interest in the latter. What was the reason of this sudden turn? The appearance of German competition, or rather the support of the Brazilian government that made the competition serious. After a period of distrust, the tide has turned in favor of German colonization in southern Brazil, and it would indeed be strange not to regard the presence of Germans on or near the Argentine borderland as a distinct asset in Brazil's race with Argentina for hegemony and the eventual control of the River Plate. ary to think of German support on that account, although the Emperor William not long ago took special pains to distinguish the foremost soldier of Brazil, Marshal Hermes da Fonseca, by inviting him to Berlin, and the marshal's candidature for the presidency was made possible largely through that visit. But the colonizing efforts of the German-Brazilians are in themselves of great strategic value. Their settlements about the River Itajahy were, not long ago, the scene of military maneuvers, and they are evidently occupying an important position in the plans of the Brazilian military authorities.

Blumenau, the center of the German settlements, then, for the first time, saw Brazilian troops occupying the terminus of the new railroad into the highlands. The strategic importance of this railroad, at present pushed only as far as Hansa, is evident from the fact that the valley of the Itajahy, which the German railroad is to follow, is regarded as the best opening into the interior. It gives the easiest access to the Brazilian plateau. This railroad wedges itself in between the Franco-American road north of it and the Belgian roads to the south, and an attempt to block its way, last year, completely failed. The German railroad now has the support of the government, possibly because it is regarded, in a way, as the key to the entire South Brazilian railroad system, which eventually will connect Rio de Janeiro and the northern ports with Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay and Argentina and thus form a vital part in the Pan-American system. At any rate, the "Santa Catharina-Eisenbahn-Aktiengesellschaft" is instrumental in accelerating the opening of Santa Catharina and Parana, and whatever its future importance, it is already a strong factor in the development of sub-tropical Brazil.

MESOPOTAMIA'S future is the subject of a great debate in the Ottoman Chamber of Deputies. It was provoked by the decision of the cabinet ministers to grant the monopoly of navigation on the Euphrates and Tigris to an Ottoman company practically controlled by the British concern that has hitherto enjoyed the sole foreign navigation concession on the two historic rivers. It is admitted that the Grand Vizier threw the Arabian Affairs entire weight of his influence into the scale in favor of the monopoly because the demand of the British firm was, and still is, so strongly backed by the British foreign office that a denial would have been tantamount to a rebuff to the power that is the natural partner of constitutional Turkey in the east. What the outcome of the debate will be, whether it will have any effect on the decision of the cabinet. is dubious; but that there is a tremendous opposition is quite certain. This opposition comes in the first place from the disappointed rivals who can command extraordinary financial, diplomatic and journalistic influence, but it is also to very large extent an expression of genuine patriotism on the part of an important section of the Young Turks, even of those belonging to the anglophile faction, and especially of the Arab deputies from Mesopotamia. There is a widespread conviction that to grant that monopoly of navigation would be the first step toward the eventual occupation of lower Mesopotamia by Great Britain, which would entail the further loss of Syria and Arabia.

In these circumstances, it is not surprising that an unusual coincidence connected with the annual hadj, the pilgrimage to Mecca, is causing comment, especially in Constantinople. Mecca will this year see a curious reunion of Moslem princes, namely, the Khedive of Egypt, the Imam Yahya of Yemen, and two great Wahabi chiefs from inner Arabia. While Abdul Hamid was caliph, the Khedive Abbas Hilmi Pasha was practically barred from making the pilgrimage. As the ruler of the most advanced Arab-speaking nation, his presence in Mecca was considered dangerous to the Ottoman caliphate, which is generally regarded as the usurpation of an office that can be filled only by an Arab. Not that Abbas Hilmi, who is of Albanian descent, could himself reasonably aspire to the caliphate. But his support of an Arab movement for the restoration of the Arab caliphate would be a very grave matter, because it would instantly involve the rivalry of the great powers. It is the coincidence of the famous rebel ruler of the Yemen, the Imam Yahya, making his pilgrimage at the same time as the Khedive, that brings the question into such prominence. For the Imam is not only a perfectly eligible candidate for the caliphate, but he is keeping up a very successful campaign against the Turks in his native Yemen, a campaign that is one of the great problems of the Young Turk administration and one of the most embarrassing heritages of the Hamidian regime.

It is quite unlikely that this and the presence of the two Wahabi chiefs in Mecca is anything but the merest chance. Still, this group of princes represents everything that is really constructive in the Arab-speaking world today. The Wahabis, especially, hold the key to the Persian gulf, and without them neither maintenance nor change of the status quo is possible. The fact that they are very rarely heard of, and have proved quite unconquerable to the Turks since the ancestor of the present Khedive of Egypt destroyed their capital eighty years ago, is a witness to their quiet power. Mesopotamia's future and the question of the Arab caliphate are as closely related to the Wahabi power as they are to the Imam's rebellion in Yemen or the British occupation of Egypt.

The President in the Bowery

It is questionable if in the entire round of his traveling and his speechmaking President Taft was ever before confronted by an audience that called for more careful consideration than that to which he was presented in a mission of the New York Bowery district on Monday night. It would have been an easy thing, under the circumstances, to have sermonized, but the President displayed better independ and more delicated than this would have called for, and remembered that he was President of the whole people, irrespective of class or possessions.

That the nation's chief should appear in person before such an audience with a message of encouragement and good cheer is not without its significance. It can hardly fail to effect its subtle uplift. "I am glad to be here," said President Taft, "if by being here and saying so I can convince you that the so-called chasm between you and those who seem for the time being to be more fortunate is not so much of a chasm after all, and that there is between them and you a deep feeling of sympathy on their part and an earnest desire that you shall have that equality of opportunity, of getting on your feet, of earning a decent livelihood and supporting your families, which we hope every man who lives under the stars and stripes enjoys."

It may seem to the cynical a far cry from the Bowery mission lodging house to anything that is entitled to be classed as opportunity, but very certain it is that the distance is not shortened by doubt or by pessimism. If it is ever to be covered it will be in the light and under the spur of kindly and hopeful words from those in a position to lead.
